
Qatar Airways invests in aviation biofuels pioneer Byogy : Biofuels Digest

In Qatar, Qatar Airways is investing in the California firm Byogy Renewables, reports Bloomberg. Chris Schroeder, a senior manager with QA is quoted as saying, "We're looking to underwrite an investment into Byogy of up to 10 percent, coupled with an off-take agreement... This will enable the company to go into the market and look for further equity investment or other partners." Financial details were not given.

Byogy makes bio-jet fuel from alcohol and it is expecting ASTM approval in late 2013. Schroeder noted that QA is hoping to have a "couple of flights to Europe by the end of 2014", with ethanol sourced jet fuel.

More Coverage on this Topic

- Byogy Renewables seeks \$30M for alcohol-to-jet commercialization, certification

Category: International